To Whom It May Concern:

As a consumer I am curious to know just how many consumers have you had testified at the Microsoft trial. Speaking for myself, I remember having to pay $500 to $700 dollars for DOS software like Word Perfect or Word Star.

With Microsoft you can buy an entire suite of software for much less than that, Microsoft Office. Where did the consumer is getting hurt here? Please do me a favor and resolve your Wars on Drug and go after "real" Criminals to really protect your taxpayers (consumers). Some States don't even have enough money to have all the prosecutors needed to prosecute our criminals and now you are looking to make criminals of anyone that is successful and who is keeping its customers (consumers) happy.

I just wish our own government could do as good of a job as Microsoft does. By the way, why don't you turn all of your attorneys and prosecute government violations of our Great Constitution that have been violated by agencies of the government.

The free marketplace has always and always will do a much better job than any Government can ever hope to achieve. Give it up!!!
